

I would like to close with a couple of predictions. I have a running joke with my main professor at UT on the subject of newspaper industry's potential longevity. The standard line has been for 100 years that radio didn't kill newspapers, TV didn't kill newspapers, that no new technology alone will mean the death of the newspaper industry.

Now, take a look at the future. The main thing I want is my magazine delivered online, free, and I want it to look and print like a magazine. We are the first to my knowledge to layout our online magazine in a desktop publishing program and convert it to a pdf file you can download, read and print in Acrobat Reader. This, in my view, is how the magazine of the future will be delivered. Thank you very much. I'll be glad to try to answer your questions.

Copyright © The Southerner 1998-2000

The Southerner
- A Magazine Online -

Presents the
Robert Penn Warren Prize for Fiction Awards
Now ONLINE @ www.southerner.net